The Cucamonga Valley's rich winemaking history flourishes today through the inaugural vintage of Cal Poly Pomona wine. With preservation in mind, third-generation vintner Don Galleano donated 100-year-old Zinfandel cuttings from the legendary De Ambrogio Ranch vineyard to the university. Through a dedicated partnership between the College of Agriculture and The Collins College of Hospitality Management, these grapes have been cultivated on campus preserving a piece of the past and creating new learning opportunities for students. To ensure the best vintage is made from these historic grapes, Master Winemaker Jon McPherson oversaw the vinification.
